

New Moon

BALLAD

New moon, when we're waiting for you to show, in a faint Earthlight ashen glow, depending on our albe - do. Full moon, now shining brightly in the night reflecting right into our sight up to one eighth of the Sun's light. Though you don't have a dark side, for some reason you decide to show us the same face of your globe o-ver a - gain; tidal deforma-tion has locked your ro-tation though libration lets us see a bit more... White moon, is just what we always con - stitue, but from a science point of view, that color would be quite un - true.
 Grey moon, cold dusty mineral com-pounds, regolith where basalt abounds, like Earth's most desolate grounds. You may come from a Big Splash, but
